The President's Danger

EVEN REPUBLICAN LEADERS C now admit the strong possibility that the Democrats will win the forthcoming American election. What is likely to result from the combination of a Republican President and a Democratic Congress?

It is hopefully argued by some authorities—Mr. Walter Lippmann authorities—Mr. Walter Lippmann among them—that Mr. Eisenhower will get along quite as well with a legislature of the opposition party as with the present Congress. After all, such observers say, the Democrats have been closer to the President on essentials during the last two years than the Republicans. Mr. Eisenhower's real enemies are the rightwing reactionaries of his own party, his real friends the internationalists and liberals of the opposition. Hence, according to this theory, his policies will be quite safe in a Democratic

All this may be true but it does not appeal in the least to the President, for he simply cannot afford to lose this election. Everyone knows, of course, that the voters do not regard the President and his party in the same light, as they showed in 1952 by giving him a huge majority and electing a Congress almost evenly split. Nevertheless, it is essential in his over-all strategy to secure Republican control of the legislature.

In a recent speech he said that split government in Washington would produce a disastrous "cold war of partisan politics . . . You all know perfectly well that you just can't have one car with two drivers at the steering wheel and expect to end up any place but in the ditch."

What he fears is obvious enough if the Democrats control the Congress they may co-operate with him on some specific policies but inevitably, in the nature of politics, they will use their power to undermine and discredit him in preparation for the presidential election two years

To the Democrats this election is a stepping stone to victory in 1956. Mr. Adlai Stevenson may claim now that he is trying to rescue Mr. Eisenhower from his Republican enemies but Mr. Stevenson's clear and natural purpose is to win the Presidency for himself at the first chance. Mr. Eisenhower entered politics to reform the Republican Party and re-mould it in the image of his liberal views. He sought to build a combination of political power—like the combination built by Franklin

for years to come, and after his own

This he failed to do in 1952 when the Republicans could not win a working legislative majority. If they lose now, the President's larger plans will lie in ruins. It will be so difficult to put them together again in 1956 that the President, as he has plainly intimated already, may refuse to run again. And if the Republicans thus lost their major and essential asset they could look forward to another period of opposition.

It is to avoid this danger that Mr. Eisenhower is now pleading for the support of Democratic and independent voters on a non-partisan basis, thus tacitly admitting that he heads a minority party. It is this danger which causes some Republican leaders to declare, somewhat hysteri-cally, that a Democratic victory would endanger the two-party sys-

The plain fact of this electionif it is indeed going against the Republicans—is that their organic split of 1952 is now catching up to them. The schism was then disguised, some what thinly. It has appeared con-stantly in the affairs of the present Congress, wherein the President was opposed on many vital issues by own followers and supported by the Democrats. Today many Republican candidates are eager to ride into of-fice on his coat tails but they are violently opposed to his basic prin-

In this situation only his mequalled prestige can prevent a Democratic victory. His danger is so evident that he has thrown himself vigorously into the campaign, making it a test of his own popularity. This strategy also has its dangers; for if he is defeated the old Republican guard, which never liked his liberalism, will say that he is a liability not an asset and will thus be encouraged to oppose him in future more actively than ever.

For all these reasons the election is supremely important to the career of the President. Since he will lose control of the Congress by losing only three seats in the House of Representatives and one seat in the Senate, and since all mid-term elections of this century, save one, have reduced the strength of the govern-ing party, Mr. Eisenhower's immediprospects are alarming. But as Mr. Truman's unexpected victory of 1948 showed, anything can happen at the polls.

The presence of British troops had become offensive to the growing nationalism of the Egyptians, despite the security offered through two world conflicts and the current cold war. And while Britain was reluctant to evacuate such a strategic site astride the 'ifeline to the Middle East, there can be than it formerly held.

There is British hope, too, that relinquishment of the Suez over the next 20 months will diminish anti-British sentiment among the Egyptians—an antipathy that has not lacked encouragement from Egyptian Government quarters. have had too much to drink can be brought into court, found guilty of what is called "impaired driving", or worse, and subjected to a penalty.

In some cases, of course, no agency intervenes between the government liquor store and the person who consumes too much of his purchase at one time. On other occasions, however, some retail vendor participates in the process. The vendor is expected to refuse to sell more liquor to any person already intoxicated or showing signs of reaching that point. But if the client leaves, climbs into his car and is arrested as he drives, is there not some analogy between the responsibility of the local supplier and the agencies in New Haven which are paying damages to a bereaved father? Are they not contributing to a condition which makes the drinker liable to

Until a few years ago he had always found plenty of moose and, selecting the most cely specimen, has shot it and packed in pieces, to his house, where he froze it for the winter.

BUT there were no moose this year. The D sportsmen—he used that word with profound contempt and spat angrily into the fire—had killed off the moose herds. there would be little meat in his use between now and spring. While uneducated, this man was a philosopher of sorts and his philosophy seemed worth considering. He found no pleasure, he said, in killing animals, though he had killed hundreds in his time. All living creatures, he supposed, had some purpose on the earth, but he was not sure what the purpose of the animal called man might be. At all events, he was prepared to believe that man was entitled to kill other animals to. vide himself with food, but not other-

HE sportsmen, on the other hand (he spat again into, the fire) were not interested in food; they were interested in killing so that they could boast afterwards of the kill, As if, he added, with certain Anglo Saxon adjectives, there was any risk in shooting a moose which was hardly more dangerous than a domestic cow and just as easy to hit.

Well, the sportsmen had been swarming into his private moose meadows now that the highways were improved and, he understood, were taking some four or five thousand moose out of the Cariboo country every year—or rather they were taking the head and horns and not much else. The meat, or most of it, was left to rot in the bush, contrary to all the laws of God and nature. This, he announced with vehemence, was a crime, especially when natives like himself, being too old to travel far, could no longer secure a winter's food supply.

THEN he plunged for the next half hour, while we drank his rank and sizzling coffee, into the argument which (whether the provincial Government

Back Into the Shadows

THE enemies of Joseph R. McCarthy may well be wrong to look forward so eagerly to the senate vote on censure of Wisconsin's junior senator. The thing has to be gone through with, of course; yet a special senate session to consider McCarthy's misdeeds will inevitably bring him, back to the centre of the stage. As today, he has ceased to

The French ratification, in principle, of the new London Treaty has done two things of real importance. It has shown that, contrary to some pessimistic belief, France is not at heart inclined to play the Soviet game in Western Europe by This is the first conclusion suggested

That was what the President hoped for, and he seems to have achieved it.

DOWN TO SIZE

Besides the President's efforts, two other processes have been at work to cut McCarthy down to size. On the one McCarthy down to size. hand, many rich and influential Republicans used to regard McCarthy in much the same way that the vestry of Trinity visit in Church seventy-five years ago regarded its vast slum real estate holdings—as perhaps not very nice but highly profit-able. The ideas of these people, who formerly gave McCarthyism a sort of false respectability, have been abruptly changed by the naked disclosure of McCarthy's enmity to Eisenhower.

On the other hand-and most important of all—the events of the last six months have taught rich and poor alike what kind of man McCarthy really is. After McCarthy-Army hearings, Watkins committee finished the job.

A very wise farmer, in what had once been a strongly pro-McCarthy district of Wisconsin, summed the result up rather 'You couldn't see those six men's pic-

Nind of ashamed of it."

One might distrust the evidence of a large but casually gathered sample of many hundreds of Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota voters. But no one can argue away the evidence of the behavior of the away the evidence of the behavior of the Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota poli-ticians. If any politician could any longer believe that McCarthy was a political asset, then some politician somewhere in this alleged McCarthy-country would be trying to work the asset for what it might be worth. Nobody is doing so.

On the contrary, the Republican Sen-ate candidate in Illinois, Joe Meek, who ren in the primary as an overt McCarthyite, now shuffles and coughs and asks "why bring that up?" if any one wants to know where he stands on the Wisconsin senator.

Still more strikingly, Wisconsin's junior McCarthy, Rep. Charles Kersten, is highly aggrieved because his opponent. Henry Reuss, has insisted on making McCarthy a major issue in the campaign. And Kersten's Milwaukee district is the district in all three mid-western

All the Democratic candidates except Reuss have preferred to avoid offending the remaining McCarthyite minority, just Republican candidates conspicus ly including Kersten, have wanted to avoid offending the anti-McCarthyite majority.

In Kersten's district, the issue would be hard to avoid. Kersten's character as a junior McCarthy goes so far that he even imitates the peculiar tone of voice, half way between Dr. Goebbels and a soap opera, which McCarthy reserves for moments of drama. Two years ago, Kersten's campaign was McCarthy, McCarthy, McCarthy all the way.

But now Kersten nobly insists that "the issue isn't Joe McCarthy, it's Charlie Kersten." He suggests, in effect, that none but plotters or subversives would be so impolite as to bring up the McCarthy matter. If you insist on ask-ing whether or not he regards McCarthy as an asset, he will try to avoid the question and he will finally say, with great reluctance. "Well, many people reat reluctance, "Well, many people em to have a kind of intuitive support for Joe; but remember, I'm standing on my own record, right on my own record."

The odds, reportedly, are against Kersten's re-election. If this single, rather shame-faced McCarthyite candidate in McCarthy's own state goes down to defeat, the political myth surely ought to be punctured. Meanwhile, the most important thing of all is probably the fact that nobody is talking about McCarthy any longer except in the

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN Hymn-Singing in a Pub

Tinners' Arms. I suppose you'd call Zennor a village but actually it's not much more than a dot on the map, on the coast road in Cornwall that claim to fame of Zennor is that it has a mermaid. The Mermaid of Zennor, so the legend goes, came up out of the sea some time back and the local vicar's son fell for her. He was so enchanted by her that he followed he back into the sea and that was the last that was seen

But what attracts people to Zennor these days is that the Tinners' Arms is there, one of the most charming little pubs in that part of the world. It has real old black beams across a ceiling so low that anyone above average height who walks about the pub emerges at closing time with a crick in the neck from beamdodging. It has a stone fireplace (not used) which is so large that people take their drinks and go and sit on stools in it.

It was a Sunday evening and the place was packed with that peculiarly English admixture of folks from widely different walks of life that you get in a pub. There were farmers, fishermen, members of the social set from nearby big towns, a couple from Lancashire on a motor tour, painters from the artists' y in St. Ives . . . The farmers and workmen of the area were all dressed colony in St. Ives

And then the singing started. The men id the women stood around the centre of the pub's big room with their drinks in their hands and began singing hymns. Their voices were rich and full and they sang in four-part harmony. I have seldom heard such wonder-ful singing. I was quite moved by it.

I went over to the bar, behind which were the proprietor and his wife. The man didn't look the least bit like one would have expected of the owner of a pub set among the doned tin mines of that lonely part of Corn-wall. Despite his casual clothes, he had the stamp of a London businessman upon him. And his wife looked like a woman who would e more at home in the salons of Mayfair than behind a bar.

"A delightful place you have here," I said to her, as the farmers and fishermen began to sing "Abide With Me."

She smiled. "Yes, it's the sort of place you could fall in love with, isn't it?"
"It certainly is," I said.
"That's what happened to my husband and

RED WARSHIPS SIGHTED

PEARL HARBOR (AP)-Admiral Felix Stump, United States naval commander in the Pacific told a press conference Wednesday that contact has been made with Communist warships and submarines throughout the Pacific. None acted in a hostile manner.

"If they showed hostile intent, we certainly would do something about it," said Stump, meeting reporters at the end of a two-day conference with his commanders from farflung Pacific posts.

While Stump did not further identify "Communist." his reference obviously was to Russians. He indicated that the Communist warships were not aware they had been sighted; thus suggesting the contacts were made by U.S. submarines.

He declined to say how close to the United States such contacts had been made.

INJURIES HURT

Stukus said injuries to key players, particularly former New York Giant tackle Arnie Weinmeister, we're largely responsible for the club's dismal showing this year.

"I warned Arnie never to turn his back while on a Western Conference playing field."

Admitting he stretched a point when he forecast at the start of the season that Lions would win six games and, possibly, a playoff berth, Stukus said:

"I knew we would lose this many (13 of 14) games. But I was selling a product and you rounded the truth when you're selling a product."

Despite their showing, Lions wet, a new you're fans in record numbers. In their first game against winnipeg, Lions set, a new WIFU attendance mark of 20,666. This figure stood up only until September 20 when 21,186 people packed Empire Stadium to watch Edmonton flail lions 23-13.

Final figures won't be known until after Lions wind up their season here against Winnipeg and Saskatchewan, but it is estimated the team will show far. What is more, three Lewick goals have been eventual game wisners, one of them was new of the magins this former teammates.

TWO-POINT MARGIN

Ragers' victory, third in five games, gave them a two-point margin over Bruins, who had been tied with New York. It also put them two points behind the second-place Detroit Red Wings and only three points back of the leading Montreal Canadiens.

Metropolitan Life celebrates a

TITION TITION TO THE PARTY OF T

60th Anniversary-

> of Metropolitan's Canadian Organization

In 1894—the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company launched a programme of expansion in Canada and opened its first office in Montreal. Previously, Metropolitan field men had been serving Canadians for 22 years—since 1872, five years after Confederation.

30th Anniversary

> of the Opening of the Canadian Head Office at Ottawa

In 1924 — the Metropolitan opened its Canadian Head Office in Ottawa, the administrative centre for the Company's business in this country. Staffed originally by 400 clerks who, in a long-planned operation, moved overnight from the Home Office in New York, the Head Office today employs some 1,100 Canadians. In the handsome building which has become a landmark in our capital city they serve the needs of Canadian policyholders.

Appointment-

of a Canadian as Vice-President and General Manager for Canada

In 1954 — another important step was taken as Mr. Brooke Claxton, with a long record of close association with the Life insurance business, and of public service, became the first Canadian to head up Metropolitan's Canada-wide organization. As Vice-President and General Manager, Mr. Claxton directs a staff of more than 3,300 Metropolitan people in Canada from coast

METROPOLITAN'S PLACE IN CANADA TODAY

- 2,700,000 Canadians insured with Metropolitan nearly one-fifth of the population and about half of all life insurance policyholders in Canada.
- Over $3 billions of insurance in force in Canada.
- Largest single holder of the senior securities issued to finance these great new Canadian developments: Iron ore in Labrador Aluminum in Kitimat.
- Over $700,000,000 invested in Canada.
- The total amount the Metropolitan has paid to Canadians since it entered Canada, plus the amount now invested in Canada, exceeds the total premiums received from Canadians by more than $433,000,000.

The Metropoliton like all Canadians has faith in the future of Canada. Since 1872 it has shown that faith by the share it has taken in the progress and development of our nation.

In your community there is a well trained, experienced Metropolitan field man to give service which is

HIGH LIVING STANDARD-An ambitious housing program, backed by funds from land leases and oil-exploration permits is raising the standard of living of southwest Alberta's Indians. Members of the Blood band who live southwest of Lethbridge are discarding their tents and log cabins for new bungalows. This photo was taken inside the home of Billy Rabbit. Alberta's Oil-Rich Indians Live Sanely

By DON HANRIGHT

Canadian Press Staff Writer STONY PLAIN, Alta. (CP)-Twenty-two producing oil wells on the Enoch band's reservation near this town 20 miles west of Edmonton have given the Indians a financial status that few Canadian communities of 250 persons could match.

Their oil income is approximately $10,000 a month, giving them at least $60,000 in a gov-ernment-held capital account.

A separate revenue account, also held at Ottawa, holds money from agricultural and petroleum leases and sale of farm products. It is tapped each month for cash distributions of $20 to each of the 250 members of the band. Some Indian families of 10 or more soon could rival the wealthy Indians of the United States. But that's not the plan. As Chief William Morin says, As Chief William morni the tribe is spending its money development the tribe is spending its money wisely on "sound development projects and not as foolishly as some of those in the United

The members of the Enoch and—and about 14,500 other Alberta Indians-own their own mineral rights. However, they are surrendered to the federal government's Indian affairs branch for negotiation, as are agricultural and timber leases.

No Indian can make a contract.

of their present reserve. Today, 50 oil wells are producing there.

The Enoch band has a four-year plan for farm ownership. Each member is given a certificate of occupancy for 160 acres. If, after four years, the land has been maintained to the land has been maintained to the council's satisfaction, a certifi-cate of possession is issued.

VALUABLE CERTIFICATES

The certificates are much like title deeds. They can be exchanged or sold and an ambi-tious farmer can build up a large farm. Ownership, however, rests with the council

Individual farmers can lease land to white men. Reserve land not allocated to individual Indians is also leased. Nearly half of the Enoch land is leased under the two methods. Income from leasing goes into a special fund to establish new Indian

The Stony Plain phenomenon is beginning to be repeated at others of Alberta's 71 reserves where the benefits of oil production are being felt.

All Indians get the same deal from the oil companies: Royal-ties of 15 per cent on natural gas and 12½ per cent on oil, not including the amount paid for exploration rights.

Too, this is the first time I've seen plastic overshoes molded with heels for those gals who never wear flatties. You can, however, buy them without the fitted heel and wear them over either low or high heels. But in my opinion, the heeled overshoes are far smarter.

Don't jump to the conclusion that because of the heel you can't fold these shoes up to slip in your purse after the down-pour has stopped. Because you'd be wrong.

You see, the heel part of the shoe is every bit as flexible as

Widower Tries to Live in the Past

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

It is logical for people to have a certain sentimental attachment for possessions that belonged to a person very near and dear to them. Sometimes, however, the sentiment is carried to far. A woman writes:

(Q) "I am a widow in my middle 50's. I married a widower idlied two years ago and there were no children in the lived alone in the home he and his wife had built shortly after they were married and was very lonely. I know he lowes me but I feet that his first wife stands between us. He wants everything in the home just as it was when she was alive. He even objects when I want to use some of my china or linens, and he won't have any of my turniture brought in the house. I feel that I should have a right to have some of my things with me, but I don't know how to handle this problem without hurting my husband's feelings. Have you any suggestions?"

husband's feelings. Have you any suggestions?"

(A) I think your husband is being unreasonable and overly sentimental about material possessions. It may take time for him to realize that one cannot live in the past, as he seems to be trying to do.

If you feel that his feelings will be hurt if you use some of your things in place of those his wife used, try humoring him about this for several months more. Then gradually bring out one thing of yours at a time and put it to use.

Start with things that you can explain as replacements for something that is worn out or getting shabby, such as towels or rugs. Then, gradually, replace other things if you feel that your possessions are in better condition or more modern than the ones already in the house.

As time goes on, you may be able to make some compromise about this matter. Fut away the things you do not like or feel are old-fashioned and replace them with yours. But do it gradually.

Your husband will find that, as you and be build a new life.

N TINF WITH THE TIMES TOWN THE TOWN THE TOWN THE THE TIMES By BILL PARKER

Citizens' Forum will feature a religious discussion on CBU at 8 tonight,

"Is the Church in Canada placing too much emphasis on its role as a centre for social activities?"

To be aired from Acadia University, Wolfville, Nova Scotia, the meeting will be under the chairmanship of Dr. Watson Kirk Donnell, president of the university.

Panelists will be Rev. Howard Greer, a young Anglican minister; Mrs. Muriel Duckworth, national chairman of the adult education committee of the Home and School Association; Allan MacEachen, MP; and George Grant, professor of philosophy for Dalhousie University.

At 9 tonight another CBC show, the Vancouver Concert Orchestra, will put its best efforts before the mike.

Conducted by John Avison, the group will play Haydn's Symphony No. 48, and Sam-martini's Sinfonia in G.

Half Dressed Says Hedda

"She's wonderful!" is the way Victoria's Nona Da-maske described Hollywood's Hedda Hopper after meeting her behind the scenes at the Vancouver Sun's Fashion and Beauty Clinic in Georgia Auditor-ium, Wednesday afternoon.

"How any woman could look so handsome and graceful at 64 is almost beyond belief." Nona said excitedly as she reported the interview by telephone to the Victoria Daily Times.

Hedda Hopper is a well-pro-portioned five-feet seven and one-half inches tall. Nona discovered. She has honey-blonde hair, which she once admitted "is as white as the whitest-headed grandmother."

The walkout, loudly backed by British Communists, stems from a demand by dockers for the right to reject-overtine work. Fewer than half of the strikers have the backing of unions involved.

CHANGES SCHEDULE

The young Queen Elizabeth, who this morning began a two-day tour of South Lancashire, made a change in her schedule to avoid the picketed Liverpood dock area.

She and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, had arranged to visit the Canada Dock Works at Liverpool, but Buckingham Palace announced Wednesday night that they would see the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine instead.

EDMONTON (CP)—A marranged in the ried couple died early today of suffocation about an hour after an all-night party ended in their east-end apartment. Fire department officials said they were overcome by smoke from a count set afire by a cigarette. Dead are Tom Forest and his wife, May. Both were believed in their late 40s.

They were rushed to hospital after smoke was seen issuing from the building about 7 a.m., but artificial respiration failed to revive them.

Landlord William Dick told police the party began at mid-about 6 a.m.

Forest was originally from walnumptori, and Rechester.
